The counterpart of the ear-boring mangala for a girl was the mangala performed when she attained puberty. This was called 'polé kaṇḍa mangala' or 'mangala performed on the sighting of defilement'. The menstrual flow was regarded as defiling, and formerly a woman observed seclusion for three days during her periods. Mangala was also performed when a woman became pregnant for the first time (kuḷiyammé mangala). A woman who had given birth to ten children, all of whom were alive, was entitled to a form of mangala known as paitāṇḍek aḷapa.

A man who killed a panther or tiger had the right to nari mangala or 'tiger mangala' being performed in his honour. Marriage increased a man's status, and a bachelor was regarded as socially and ritually inferior to a married man. Mangala was performed to a bachelor's corpse before burying or cremating it, presumably in order to raise the status of the soul of the dead bachelor.

A man who had lost two wives in succession was ritually married to a plantain tree before marrying his third wife. The marriage to the plantain tree was called 'bāḷek mangala', or 'plantain mangala', and the tree was cut down soon after the mangala.

The number three, in certain contexts, is considered very unlucky everywhere in south India. When a man has lost his first two wives in succession, and intends marrying again, the third wife is considered certain to share the fate of the first two. The performance of 'bāḷek mangala' and the cutting down of the tree soon after frees the human wife from the fate which would have otherwise overtaken her.

Formerly when a man built a new house he performed 'mané mangala' or 'house mangala'. Mangala was performed for the head of the house on this occasion. Another form of mangala which has entirely disappeared now is 'ettu mangala' or 'ox mangala'.

The ideal and usual marriage in Coorg is for a virgin to marry a bachelor and this is called 'kanni mangala' or 'virgin mangala'. The marriage rites are fullest when a virgin marries a bachelor, and they are abbreviated to some extent when a widower marries a virgin. They are still further abbreviated when a widow marries a widower, and many old Coorgs would even refuse to accord to such a marriage the name of mangala.

The ritual that is performed at the 'marriage of a virgin' may be divided into two parts, one which might be called the mangala part, and the other the non-mangala part. The mangala-part of marriage
